Small business provisions in NDAA Reauthorizing SCORE; changes to SBDCs, Women's Biz Ctrs.

Following a pattern of recent years, the House Armed Services Committee approved several small business provisions in the fiscal 2018 National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA).

The measures would reauthorize the Small Business Administration's "SCORE" program and make changes to its Small Business Development Centers and Women's Business Centers, according to the bill text released by the committee chairman. There also

Sharpe vs. Roth in turf battle: IG

An investigation by the General Services Administration's Office of Inspector General (OIG) found a deep divide at the top levels of the agency as a result of the formation of the Technology Transformation Service in 2016.

The OIG determined that former GSA Administrator Denise Turner Roth retaliated against Federal Acquisition Service Commissioner Thomas Sharpe because Sharpe had complained to the OIG and others about the new service. Sharpe, a career executive, retired on June 24.

Sharpe alleged that the creation of the new service and GSA's use of the Acquisition Services Fund to pay for the new service violated the 2006 General Services Modernization Act and resulted in "mismanagement, waste of funds and abuse of authority," according to the OIG's report on its investigation.

In return, Roth retaliated would be some modifications in definitions and terms used in small business contracts.

There is concern about the impact of Sect. 801 regarding the government buying from online marketplaces (see story on page 3).

SCORE program

The SBA's Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) program would be reauthorized and permanently referred to as SCORE under the bill. The SCORE program offers counseling to small business owners by volunteer retirees.

Vendor competition rising: survey

A survey of government contractors by Grant Thornton found that competition is increasing and firms are diversifying.

The survey showed a significant drop in the win rates for new proposals. The win rate dropped to 26%, the lowest rate in six years. Last year, companies reported a 35% win rate.

"This gives a strong indication that competition is increasing," the

New HUBZone maps are online

The Small Business Administration has put a new HUBZone map application online, making it easier to identify whether a specific location is within a HUBZone or whether there are HUBZones nearby.

The Historically Underutilized Business Zones (HUBZones) maps are located at this link: <http://www.sba.gov/hubzone-maps>.

SBA partnered with the U.S. Digital Service to create the new map application. It shows the latest HUBZones as well as Qualified

In 2016, federal government revenue as a percentage of total company revenue fell to 54%, from 74% in 2015. This possibly was due to diversification to include more state and local, commercial and global clients, the authors wrote.

"Because of funding issues associated with sequestration, federal contractors found it necessary to

NDAA has small business measures

The NDAA also would require an annual report on the effectiveness of the program, and would direct the SBA to establish standards protecting the information of entrepreneurs counseled by SCORE.

In addition, SBA would be required to use webinars and electronic mentoring to increase SCORE's impact. The SBA also would need to report to Congress on the online outreach and to do a five-year strategic plan report.

Women's Business Centers

The House version of the NDAA would require the SBA's Office of Women's Business Ownership to set up an accreditation program for its grant recipients.

Furthermore, the bill would define key terms relating to eligibility for grants and adjust the statutory cap on grants and the requirement for matching funds by $35,000. It also would establish a mechanism for use of unobligated grant funds at the end of the fiscal year and improve oversight of grant recipients.

The SBA also would be ordered to do longer-term planning for the WBCs that includes continued authorization levels, and to improve the application process.

The NDAA also would limit the ability of the SBA Administrator to waive the requirement for matching funds by grant recipients, according to the bill text.

SBDCs

The NDAA would prohibit the SBA Administrator from using programs unauthorized by Congress to deliver entrepreneurial development assistance. It would further require the SBA Administrator to report on all such activities to Congress.

Those provisions address a pet peeve of the House Small Business Committee. Lawmakers from both parties have criticized the SBA in the past for setting up new programs to deliver training and assistance without explicit permission from Congress.

The NDAA also would allow

Small Business Development Centers (SBDCs) to have more flexibility in marketing and advertising their products and services.

Other provisions affecting SBDCs include:

- The SBA would meet with the Association of SBDCs to develop data collection documents. As a result there would be a data collection and a report to Congress.
- SBDCs would be allowed to collect fees for operating partnerships and cosponsorships. Such fees currently are not permitted.
- The SBA could pay up to $100,000 more to the Association of SBDCs for accreditation services.
- The SBA would be prohibited from sharing SBDC client information with third parties. "Sharing sensitive information, such as the name of a business, is not necessary," the bill text stated.
- The bill would allow only higher education institutions to become SBDCs. Current participants would be allowed to remain an SBDC even if they do not meet that requirement.

Section 8(d)

The NDAA has language regarding the past performance pilot program authorized in section 8(d) of the Small Business Act. It allows small firms to use defense weapons sales to U.S. allies as past performance.

Most of the NDAA provisions were developed by members of the House Small Business Committee.

HR 1773, submitted by Chabot, and HR 1774, submitted by Rep. Nydia Velazquez, D-NY, ranking member of the committee, were included in the NDAA. Those bills primarily pertained to improving definitions and reporting requirements at the SBA.

There also is language on the roles of commercial market representatives and business opportunity specialists.

Accelerated payments change gets pushback

The Professional Services Council requested that the White House revise its new policy regarding accelerated payments to small business federal contractors.

In a June 15 memo, the Office of Management and Budget eliminated federal agencies' quarterly reporting on the accelerated payments, while also encouraging agencies to continue the payments to the best of their ability. (See June 23 edition of Set-Aside Alert).

PSC's Senior Vice President Alan Chvotkin wrote that there is "confusion" on whether the recent memo cancels OMB's January 2017 order directing the agencies to make the accelerated payments. The more recent OMB memo only "encourages" such payments.

PSC recommends that OMB cancel previous memos and issue a new memo ordering the payments. More information: <http://goo.gl/tgukTC>

NDA Sect. 801 raises concerns

Section 801 of the House's National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal 2018 is raising concerns about possibly reducing vendors' access to federal markets.

The section would require the General Services Administration to contract with multiple commercial online marketplaces, such as Amazon, for the government's procurement of certain commercial products.

Roger Waldron, president of the Coalition for Government Procurement, warns that such a change would have a huge impact and many contractors are likely to see their access to the federal market shrink (<http://goo.gl/qW2ETq>).

Section 801 (<http://goo.gl/uWhzYm>) does not say how small business would be addressed, except to say that Congress would need to be informed of small vendor participation in the online marketplaces within three years.

Sharpe vs. Roth in turf battle: IG

against Sharpe by "taking actions that threatened (Sharpe) with transfer to another position" and by "significantly" changing Sharpe's job responsibilities," the OIG said.

The acquisition fund receives fees that agencies pay to GSA to use schedule contracts and other contracts, and from GSA sales of surplus property.

Sharpe reportedly was worried that by using the fund for the technology service, the agency was making it harder for FAS to meet its mission.

Roth denied any wrongdoing in an email to Federal News Radio. "While I respect this process, the OIG's findings are wrong and disappointing," Roth wrote.

Column: Your friendly neighborhood OSDBU

by John Hale, founder and CEO, The Cornerstone Group LLC, and former director, U.S. Dept. of Energy Office of Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization

This is the first column in a series on strategies for engaging and leveraging the Office of Small & Disadvantaged Business Utilization (OSDBU).

In the beginning.....

In 1978, President Carter signed Public Law 95-507, which amended the Small Business Act and the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 to make federal procurement more readily accessible to all small businesses.

It states that "it is the policy of the government to provide maximum practicable opportunities in its acquisitions to small businesses," and it applies to both prime contracting and subcontracting.

The Office of Federal Procurement Policy (OFPP) Letter No. 79-1, implemented Section 15(k), which required agencies with contracting authority to establish an OSDBU and appoint a director.

Congress progressively established statutory goals for eight of the ten small business goals (prime and subcontract) and various socio-economic categories.

The small business prime and subcontract goals of each agency are negotiated each year with the Small Business Administration. The SBA annually issues each agency's small business scorecard, which is the primary metric and tool used to evaluate the agencies' small business goal achievement and programs, resulting in a letter grade.

OSDBU directors maintain a friendly competition based upon who earns the highest grade on their respective scorecards.

Contractors should be aware that HUBZone is the hardest goal for agencies to achieve. Therefore, in pursuit of competitive awards and "all things being equal," partnering with HUBZone firms is a good idea.

A day in the life of an OSDBU

Every OSDBU is responsible for executing a set of federal statutory and regulatory defined functions. However, each OSDBU must execute them consistent with its agency's mission and culture.

OSDBU activities can broadly be described in two categories - in-reach (within the agency) and out-reach (external engagement of stakeholders). Significant effort is focused developing and maintaining relationships with colleagues in the acquisition and program offices.

The OSDBUs neither execute the contract warrant (contract officer) nor possess the funds (program office) to spend on agency priorities.

The acquisition process starts with the program office. The process is always a "give and take." To be effective, the OSDBU must engage at the onset of an acquisition and small businesses must respond to market research (sources sought notices).

In most instances, the issue is not a shortage of capable small businesses, but a lack of focus on ensuring a sufficient number of small-business eligible contract opportunities.

OSDBU outreach is a highly visible function. However, it expands beyond direct interaction with the business community. Other primary activities include engagement with stakeholders such as Congress, trade associations, media outlets, etc.

Federal agencies prefer to contract with firms they know and trust who will assist them in executing their respective missions. Likewise, contractors desire a transparent acquisition process that affords access to agency personnel and contracts. The OSDBU is an influencer, connector and enabler of businesses winning government contracts.

Small business set-asides can be a friend to large businesses

The OSDBU is charged with the responsibility to maximize small business contract actions. Therefore, what is the purpose of large businesses engaging the OSDBU?

It appears counter-productive. To the contrary, small business is a team sport.

Large business survival (in some cases), sustainability and growth can be enhanced by partnering with the OSDBU. That is especially true for mid-tier firms and for advanced small businesses that have outgrown their small business designation but remain significantly smaller than Fortune 500 firms. Partnership with the OSDBU, and by extension with the small business community, will increase the number of small-business eligible contract actions.

This is achieved through 1) reducing the risk profile of small businesses and 2) increasing the contract value of small business eligible contracts. A win-win situation is realized, whereby federal agencies can increase, in number and value, their small business contract awards and large businesses can gain access to additional contract opportunities. However, this strategy is most effectively executed in a scalable manner through leveraging professional expertise.

And the rest of the story . . . .

Next time we'll address "Empowering the OSDBU to be your advocate without them knowing it!"

John Hale III is Founder and CEO of The Cornerstone Group, LLC (TCSG) a consultancy that provides strategic advice for businesses to achieve their near and long-term goals and win additional contracts/grants. Mr. Hale also serves as Vice President of the National Contract Management Association Bethesda chapter. Prior to founding TCSG, Mr. Hale served as the U.S. Energy Department's OSDBU Director and the U.S. SBA's Deputy Associate Administrator for Capital Access. Mr. Hale previously held leadership positions in the financial services and restructuring industries.

SBA operations review

The GAO reviewed the setup of the SBA's Office of Government Contracting and Business Development (OGCBD) and its field staff.

Some field staff implement OGCBD programs but report to the Office of Field Operations. While SBA officials said this allows these staff to support the goals of the OGCBD as well as those of the individual field offices, it also results in "inconsistent program delivery," the GAO said.

The GAO also examined several of its recommendations that SBA has not implemented, and looked at the timeliness of SBA's rulemaking.

Small biz wins big share of contracts in Puerto Rico

Small businesses in Puerto Rico more than doubled their share of U.S. federal contracting dollars awarded in Puerto Rico between fiscal 2006 and fiscal 2015, according to a new study by the GAO.

The small firms in Puerto Rico got 24% of all federal contract obligations in Puerto Rico in fiscal 2006, which rose to a high of 51% in fiscal 2015. The small firms' percentage of such obligations remained high in fis-

More government procurement execs 'overworked'

Nearly 40% of public sector procurement officials report being overworked, according to Onvia's second annual Survey of Government Procurement Professionals. That was 4% higher than in last year's survey.

The government contracting of-cal 2016, at 47%.

More small business awards were made in Puerto Rico through the SBA's 8(a) Business Development Program than through the programs for HUBZone, women-owned and service-disabled veteran-owned combined, the GAO said.

officials say they are struggling to find the time to research and put together well-written solicitations.

As a result, Onvia's Procurement Performance Index dropped from 76.4 last year to the current value of 72.6. With fewer staff, the buyers are challenged to "do more with less."

Competition rising: report

seek contracting opportunities outside of federal government agencies. We see this trend continuing in the foreseeable future and possibly driving down pricing and profit percentages on federal contracts. Grant Thornton advised contractors to look at their current pricing techniques to determine if adjustments are necessary.

Another trend in 2016 was a "surge" in higher profit rates before interest and taxes, with 56% of the contractors surveyed saying their profits were greater than 6%.

The study suggested that the non-federal projects might be raising the profit rate.
